

British Army loses hard disk drive with millions of soldiers data

The British army has lost a hard disk drive with confidential data of up to 1.7 million people. The defense minister Bob Ainsworth confirmed this affair. On the hard disk drive were bank accounts, addresses, passport- and driver licenses from soldiers and recruits.

source: Bild german newspaper, October 2008